Community Supervision and Development
Sponsoring Division: Centre for Aboriginal Programs and Services
Previous Course Code & Title: AJS102
Course Effective Date:

of Credits:	1.5
----------------------	-----

Course Description:

This training course is for persons working within Aboriginal communities who are implementing or supervising restorative justice programs that meet the legislative requirements of Criminal Code sentencing provisions for Aboriginal offenders and the Regina vs. Gladue decision that interprets the legislation.

The course will examine the legalities, considerations and challenges of the Gladue case and will explore its impact, in particular towards building trusting relationships between the Aboriginal communities and the criminal justice system. The training will also analyze the unique circumstances and discrimination of Aboriginal offenders and their communities that led to the legislative changes.

Appropriate protocols to work more effectively with Aboriginal communities will be discussed. In addition, we will outline the implementation of strategies and practical considerations to consider when meeting with communities who are developing programs and services to meet the specific factors of the Gladue decision. The training will also identify what strengths and initiatives exist in Aboriginal communities and identify how various jurisdictions in Canada are currently responding to the Gladue decision.

Participants in this training are expected to come from across Canada and include those working in the justice system, those working with Aboriginal offenders or those who are establishing justice programs and services in Aboriginal communities. The course will also attract international students interested in Canada's lead in restorative justice initiatives.

Course Goal(s): N/A

Course Learning Objectives:

Upon successful completion of this course, the participant will be able to:

- Locate the principles of sentencing mandated in the Criminal Code that relate to Aboriginal offenders.
- Review the written decision, Regina v Gladue and the factors judges must consider when sentencing an Aboriginal offender.
- Discuss the considerations and challenges of the Gladue decision from both the court and the community's perspective.
- Consider what impacts the Gladue decision has had on the current criminal justice system.

- Examine how traditional Aboriginal justice compares to the Canadian justice system and how the systemic discrimination of Aboriginal people led to overrepresentation of Aboriginal people in the justice system.
- Discuss the impact of dislocation, discrimination and social injustice to Aboriginal people and how balance can be restored between Aboriginal offenders and their communities.
- Consider what strengths and initiatives exist in Aboriginal communities and discuss how to build trust between Aboriginal communities and the courts.
- Describe how to work with local Aboriginal communities within local protocols.
- Examine the treatment of Aboriginal women offenders
- Consider the treatment of Aboriginal offenders who have Fetal Alcohol Syndrome
- Consider what a just sentence might be for an Aboriginal Offender
- Examine issues of community safety and victim safety
- Examine the Toronto Gladue (Aboriginal Persons) Court as a role model for other provincial Aboriginal Courts
